Hunting Bad Flavors.

The farmer that sells his butter to the corner grocer has little trouble with what are known as "flavors." If his butter has all kinds of flavors he is likely never to hear from it, because the butter goes into the same lot with other butter and loses its identity. Not so the farmer that delivers his butter to select customers, who generally pay him something above the ruling price for it. If his butter develops flavors not desired by the consumers, the maker is sure to hear from it.

In such a case it is of little use to attempt to reason with the consumer whether or not they are mistaken The best way is to assume that the customers have grounds for their complaints and begin looking for the source of the bad odors. A careful in-spection should be made of the part of the farmhouse in which the cream is kept and the butter churned. If they are found to be in the proper condition next inspect the cans, pans and milk vessels in which the milk is kept.

Some of our enterprising farmers have learned how to make a curd test. This is the setting of milk in a glass tube or bottle, allowing it to ferment and then applying the nose as a tester. If the milk is bad the nose will disto the eye also tells something. If at $500,000. the curd is full of holes it shows the presence of undesirable ferments in the milk. If the milk curd is from clean milk it will be smooth and quite Pig Weaning Points.

When pigs are some three weeks old they should be given a blood warm in a small trough to which the mother has no access. The little fellows will not eat much at three weeks of age, yet we generally begin to feed them then and think it desirable to do so. After six weeks the pigs will eat fairly well and many then wean them. at least eight weeks old. It is very seldom that some are not weaker than others, and it is a good plan to remove the strong ones and let the weaker ones suck a few weeks longer. This will make the whole lot more even and they will sell better in the fall. When weaning the pigs do not pen them, but give them all the freedom possible.

For several years we have let our pigs run with their mothers until the old sows undertook the weaning them selves. Pigs treated in this way will make a remarkable growth. Of course when a fall litter is to be raised such a practice can not be followed. We are able to feed our sows cheaply with might be cheaper to separate the pigs from the sows after eight weeks and fatten and sell them as soon as possible.-T. A. Strohschein, Winnebago Co., Wis., in Farmers' Review.

Develop Frames.

It is desirable to develop the frames of the young pigs, and ly. fed on too much corn. Those that have begun to awake to the danger of pigs, that is, pigs intended to be developed into breeders later, yet make the mistake of beginning the too early feeding of a corn ration to the pigs intended for pork. The latter must have good strong bones or they may "go down behind" long before they have reached the end of the fattening period. We have seen hogs that had been fed on corn alone for months so weak in the bones that long before the slaughtering day came they could not stand on their hind legs. Develop the frame and a strong one and finish off on corn.

To make good gains, steers should be kept in absolute quiet. Anything which tends to rouse them or make them nervous interferes very seriously with their gain in weight. It should also be noted that they are free from lice, as a lousy steer will not make the best use of his food. Cleanliness with regard to managers is extremely important, and the animals should be fed only what they will eat up clean before leaving the manger.

The Successful Feeder.

It is not necessarily the man who gets the animal to eat the largest quantity of food who will get the largest gains, but it is the man whose whole interest in entered in the animal's, who watches everything in connection with them, and who is willing to sacrifice his own comfort and convenience to that of the animals under his charge.
